Brittany Stryker earned her occupational therapy doctoral degree in 2006 and is now a leader and advocate for the OT field, the OT program at Creighton University and for children with orthopedic needs.

Stryker operates two busy and successful orthotic and prosthetic practices serving every hospital in Las Vegas. She has made tremendous inroads helping children with orthopedic conditions by carving out a specific expertise. Stryker is only one of four providers in the country who is certified to fit an innovative bracing system to help children with scoliosis.

Stryker is a team player, leading by example, motivating her staff and her patients with energy, passion and innovation. She balances her love of patients, students, friends, family and Creighton equally as they all hold their own special places in her heart.

Stryker values her Creighton education and goes above and beyond with her support. She sponsors rotation students, volunteer services with the OT program and provides scholarships for students through her foundation. In 2014, she and her husband created the first fully endowed scholarship for Creighton occupational therapy students.

Stryker leads a value-driven professional life and enriches the lives in her community. She established KIDDOS (Kids in Dire/Difficult Orthopedic Situations) to assist low income families with financial support for medical costs. She has partnered with local fire departments and the Safe Kids Foundation to ensure infants are provided with safe car seats and she has also served with Project MediShare for Haiti and Project SAVEarth.

For her selfless dedication to patients and to students, Brittany Stryker is a most deserving recipient of the 2016 School of Pharmacy and Health Professions Alumni Merit Award.
